SERVICES

The more research teaches us about health and wellness, the more we understand illness and healing involve the mind, body and spirit. A single approach fails to address the complexities of who we are as individuals.

My work provides my patients a breadth of skills that address the expanse of who they are as a living, breathing, individual with a varied past and unique needs. While the work may appear seamless to my patients, it incorporates treatment modalities across a range of disciplines to address the different facets of physical, emotional, and spiritual pain.

My path, like my work, has followed a unique path. Starting in an operating room as a surgical technician and expanding into graduate work that took me into a mental hospital as an intern, and a neonatal lab as a graduate student researcher. At the same time I had the good fortune to become the last student of the last of the bloodline Kahuna's in Hawaii. From there the next 28-years were spent as an engineer while gently fanning the embers of that start in life. Embers that became a flame in 2000 and created the path I now walk as a healer.
