

Charles Merlet - Your 2012 Focus

From Grandmother, An Ancient Shoshone Elder As Channeled by Lori Wilson

Gifted by Pam Rim

This year 2012 will be remembered as a year you changed your life completely. You have already experienced extraordinary shifts in paradigms as well as within your own physiology. There is nothing to be worried about regarding your lower back, the treatments you are having will be replaced by a new sort of healing that changes your gait, muscles and energy flow overall. Your work colleagues will be grateful of these new changes as they need you to step into yet another leadership position. This one will only last 3 moons, instead of the traditional 6 or 8. Whilst you may not actually yet feel stronger, you need know simply – that you will strengthen.

A small favour asked by you in March burgeons into a wonderful opportunity for your own leg of power in the business world once again. You have always been a leader and you will remain a strong one. Time this year to take this post again of clear leadership and not to worry that it will take all you have to offer. You will not be torn any longer between work and family. Your oldest son still has many years at home and will have time to learn from you, even though you worry it is too late for his teaching. Clarity is your gatekeeper, clarity of communication with others at all times. This is your year of freedom. Ask your favour and then enjoy the rewards.

This upcoming year you will be able to stand, live, breathe – to walk in congruence with everything you have stood for in these last 16 years. It will be the year you stop rushing and smile more. You will plan less and at the same time accomplish more. The planning you began in 2009 will finally be recognized by your teammates. This extension of marketing and vision will make a steady plan for the other to follow. You can then attend to planning anew once again. As such, time will feel itself slowed down such the likes you have not felt since you were a smaller child. You, yourself are not a child – that innocence is truly gone. The adult that does remain however has made such strong and sturdy choices in these past few years that the fabric of your life will finally match that which you are inside. Inside and outside will match. I send you a large sigh of relief that you have arrived here. No one, save yourself, will ever truly know how difficult and mature the choices you have made this year have been. You have done most of it in silence and relatively privately. I honour your choices.

Speak your truth in continued ways. You will be more direct with others than you ever could dare imagine. At the same time, you will grow more compassionate than you could have ever dreamed. And this will be genuine. You will hold others accountable and responsible – yes, however there shall be casualness in all of it. You are finally free to live yourself uninhibited by politeness to others who are not able for whatever genuine reason, to pull their own weight. You will step aside and let them learn their own ways to do this thing. You will not watch, judge or hold your breath. Instead you will be playing. You have done all you can to mend the bridges with your sister. She will find her own way from here on.

This year ahead will see you walking strongly with two distinct legs of focus. One is on rejuvenating your vitality so that you will not be so offended by all when they ask you to expend your energy. The second leg will be to focus on relationships that are deeply meaningful to you. By summer time make sure to cultivate those that are still a good fit and cultivate others that will be new. You will smile inside soon from a very deep place. After these two legs have walked and stretched – by fall time you will become quite clear as to how to best serve in your working world. You will need two new team members to help with the growth. Thank you for all you gift to our world with your undying skill, precision and quiet love.

Be blessed.

AHO. Grandmother
www.meetloriwilson.com

